(54) DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM OF FAULT INFORMATION

(57)Abstract:

PURPOSE: To make it possible to easily cope with the change of a system to be a controlled object by adding a control origin address to fault information, transmitting the information from a system to a center and transferring fault information to a control origin or directly transmitting fault information to the control origin from the center.

CONSTITUTION: A control origin address 23 is added to the fault information 22 collected by a system 21 and the information is transmitted to a center 11. When the center 11 receives this, the center transfers the fault information 22 to the control origin 31 of a set control origin address 23. When the device within the system 21 is moved to other system, the control origin address is deleted from the system 21 of a moving origin and the address is added to a moving destination system. When the fault generation system 21 is in a communication abnormality state and is not capable of performing a transmission to the center 11, the fault information 22 is directly transferred or transmitted to the control origin 31. Thus, the change of the device of the system to be a controlled object can be easily coped with and fault information can be directly communicated with the control origin when a line is abnormal.
